Today's retail workforce management challenges

Retail workforce management is fragmented.

When there are so many people, processes and systems involved in managing a workforce, it's little wonder so many retailers are struggling to gain the clarity they need to operate more efficiently.

Everything from recruiting skilled workers, to staying on top of labour costs, to keeping your employees happy and engaged is often managed separately.

This can lead to a lack of cohesion resulting in disengaged teams, hours of unnecessary admin, and a lack of essential insights that are so critical when it comes to informing and driving continuous improvement.

Lack of compliance, as keeping accurate records of the entire workforce becomes an insurmountable challenge - resulting in hefty fines for failing to meet legislative and audit requirements.

By unifying the various elements of workforce management with one seamless system and a single source of truth, retailers can ensure they are equipped to meet today's industry challenges head-on.

Challenge 1: Data clarity

Without access to actionable analytics and intelligence across the entire employee lifecycle, it's difficult to make informed decisions and improve performance.

Despite this, many businesses lack visibility over essential business intelligence, such as the interplay between minimising labour costs and maximising sales revenue.

Being able to make real-time adjustments to create labour efficiencies is absolutely key to profitability.

Without these insights, many retailers are ill-equipped when it comes to strategic, numbers-led decision making.

Challenge 2: Compliance

Every year, hundreds of businesses are penalised for not operating in compliance with employment law.

With Fair Work constantly changing the rules, it's little wonder businesses find it difficult to stay on top of compliance.

From increased penalty rates to new rules around annualised salaries, understanding the exact implications of each and every change can feel like an insurmountable challenge.

A solution that automatically records employee information, and includes built-in alerts and pay rules will help ensure compliance from day one.

Challenge 3: Efficiency

With so many different processes across stores and head office, creating efficiencies in retail workforces is no walk in the park.

Is your team engaged and motivated? Are you optimising your labour costs and creating the most effective roster possible?

Can you accurately track time and attendance and send it straight to payroll without relying on manual data entry or messy integrations?

Taking into account all these factors can seem incredibly complex, but if you get it right, the entire business will benefit.

Challenge 4: Legacy systems

The idea of "digital transformation" is front-of-mind for many leading businesses, and for good reason.

The future of bricks-and-mortar stores is highly reliant on retailers' ability to adopt the latest technology, stay at the forefront of innovation, and remain agile.

So many retailers still rely on outdated systems and processes – when they could be creating business-wide improvements with automation and artificial intelligence (AI).

This only creates more work, and means employees are not empowered with the tools they need to perform at their peak.

Mobile technology to drive engagement

Focus on employee experience

Your people are the lifeblood of your business: research shows that retailers who focus on employee experience are more likely to perform better financially.

As a result, forward-thinking employers are investing in technology to enhance the employee experience. For shift workers, streamlined workforce management can have a huge impact on how they feel about their employer – and can lead to frustration if it's not done right.

Provide immediate access

Employees don't want to spend unnecessary time and energy checking their roster, organising their shifts or requesting leave.

They expect to be able to undertake work-related tasks from their mobile device – in the same way they do in their personal lives. This extends across all HR-related matters such as expense claims, employee benefits, clocking in and health checks.

Communicate effectively

Employees want to feel like they're being kept in the loop of what's going on in the business. Keeping them informed about new policies and procedures and making sure they are equipped with the information they need to do their job a must.

That's where mobile technology can help, giving staff easy access to the right information all in one place, and enabling timely communication as changes occur.

Put the power in the hands of your people

We manage our lives on the go more than ever before, which is why it's important to provide your employees with a mobile app

This is especially important in sectors like retail, where people aren't typically sitting at desks and need to be able to access work-related information on the go.
